Where else - in what single nation of modern times - do we find four such cities as Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, and Boston, in such close proximity France has her Paris, but where are her three other cities comparable to ours Austria has her Vienna, but what else Even England has no second city to contest the palm with the second of our glorious galaxy. The rise of our great cities is but one chapter. A lifetime ago reaches beyond the birth of the Great Republic. Within that brief period - that single point on the surface of history - a great power has grown up, indisputably of the first class among the nations of the earth. Men have witnessed great...
