Excerpt: . . . 11 stall new science instruments that will improve the Hubbles observational capabilities and to replace batteries and gyroscopes that will allow the Hubble to continue operating through 2013. Heliophysics The Presidents FY09 budget request for NASA includes 577. 3 million in direct program dollars for the Heliophysics theme, which seeks to understand the Sun and its effect on the Earth and the rest of the solar system; the conditions in the space environment and their effects on astronauts; and to develop and demonstrate technologies to predict space weather. The FY09 request represents a decrease of 267. 6 million in direct dollars from the FY08 appropriation, due in large part to the programmatic and budgetary transfer of Deep Space Network and ground network systems ( approximately 250 million ) to the Space Operations Mission Directorate. The program funds: Heliophysics research, including research and analysis; space missions; sounding rockets and other scientific platforms; science data and computing technology; the Living with a Star program that investigates solar variability and its effects on Earth ( space weather ) and the rest of the solar system; the Solar Terrestrial Probes program, which studies the interrelationships among the Sun, the Earth, and planetary systems; and the small and medium-class competitively-selected missions ( Explorer missions ) that endeavor to provide frequent flight opportunities to investigate focused research. Key Issues for Heliophysics How are data collected by NASA research satellites used for operational space weather services What is needed to ensure the optimal use of NASA-funded research to improve space weather prediction...
