He writes an e-mail to the junior Senator from Ohio, Jeff Corcoran, in which he outlines what he believes, and how disappointed he is that there seems to be no place for him within his own party. Corcoran in turn involves Randolph in a study group which eventually includes many of the leading party moderates including the Chairman of the Republican National Committee. Gordon begins looking for fresh new faces to lead the Party in anticipation of the next big Primary season. His hope is to combine a fresh face with fresh new ideas thus creating a much broader appeal. Gordon confronts a tumultuous group of conservative delegates at a National RNC Meeting which ultimately leads to his resignation as chairman. He then recruits one of the most attractive of the new...
